

Case Study :- Riverside Handrail

Interclamp®
The right connection

One of the most common applications of Interclamps is for the construction of handrails and this installation uses all the common fittings used in a standard handrail. This location is on fast flowing tributary of a river, before it meets the main channel. Handrail was required to be installed to prevent the general public from going close to the edge and falling into the water.

